Results Oriented Management and Accountability (ROMA)

Results Oriented Management and Accountability (ROMA) is an interagency initiative promoting outcome-based management strategies for community, state, and federal agencies participating in the Community Service Block Grant programs. ROMA was designed by the Office of Community Services' Monitoring and Assessment Task Force (MATF) in response to the 1993 Government Performance and Results Act (GPRA). Local agencies can measure and demonstrate outcomes they have achieved according to the six national ROMA goals established by the MATF.

Activity

Activities are what a program does with its inputs to fulfill its mission. Examples are sheltering homeless families, educating the public about signs of child abuse, and providing adult mentors for youth. Program activities result in outputs.

Benchmarks

Performance data that are used for comparative purposes. A program can use its own data as a baseline benchmark against which to compare future performance. It also can use data from another program as a benchmark. In the latter case, the other program often is chosen because it is exemplary and its data are used as a target to strive for, rather than as a baseline.

Impact

The direct or indirect effects or consequences of achieving program goals.

Indicator

(Outcome) indicators are the specific items of information that track a program's success on outcomes. They describe observable, measurable characteristics or changes that represent achievement of an outcome. For example, a program whose desired outcome is that participants pursue a healthy lifestyle could define "healthy lifestyle" as not smoking; maintaining a recommended weight, blood pressure, and cholesterol level; getting at least two hours of exercise each week; and wearing seat belts consistently. The number and percent of program participants who demonstrate these behaviors then is an indicator of how well the program is doing with respect to the outcome.

Input

Inputs are resources a program used to achieve program objectives. Examples are staff, volunteers, facilities, equipment, curricula, and money. A program uses inputs to support activities.

Measure

The means used for assessing the achievement of objectives. Measures may be quantitative or qualitative, objective or subjective. The particular form of measurement used is dependent on the objective to be measured, the availability of opportunities for measurement and the cost of the measurement process.

Milestones

Key accomplishments or threshold points through which project participants must pass if it is to be successful.

National Performance Indicator

The CSBG Network uses national indicators (NPIs) of community action performance. To access the National Performance Indicators Instruction Manual, use the following link:

http://www.nascsp.org/data/files/csbg_is_survey/additional/nascsptrainersperformancetar getingmanual8-18-08final.pdf .

Outcome

The benefits or changes for clients, households, or a community that are produced during or after participation in program activities.

Outcome Measure

An assessment of the results, effects or impact of a program activity compared to its intended purpose.

Outcome Target

Outcome targets are numerical objectives for a program's level of achievement on its outcomes. After a program has had experience with measuring outcomes, it can use its findings to set targets for the number and percent of participants expected to achieve desired outcomes in the next reporting period. It also can set targets for the amount of change it expects participants to experience. See NASCSP Targeting Field Manual.

Output

Products of a program's activities, such as the number of meals provided, classes taught, brochures distributed, or participants served. Another term for "outputs" is "units of service." A program's outputs should produce desired outcomes for the program's participants.

Output Measure

A tabulation, calculation or recording of activity or effort that can be expressed in a quantitative or qualitative manner.

Performance

Self-Sufficiency [SERVICE CATEGORY 8]

One of nine categories in Section E or programs from the CSBG Act.

The purpose of this section is to capture expenditures being devoted to comprehensive, long-term programs of family development whose purpose is to help program participants achieve a set of goals which will result in greater self-sufficiency and will eliminate some of the causes of that family's poverty. While all CSBG expenditures in some way relate to these purposes, this section is for reporting on specific sub-grantee programs whose name and core purpose is related to such coordinated comprehensive strategies.

Comprehensive Self-Sufficiency Program

- A comprehensive system of support services which promotes, empowers and nurtures families or family members toward self-sufficiency. Self-Sufficiency programs provide trained staff to assist families with barriers that may be associated with multiple service categories in Section E and therefore do not fit neatly in a single category. At a minimum, the following elements are included in a comprehensive case management program:
- Comprehensive assessment of the issues facing the family or family members and the resources the family brings to address these issues.
- Written plan toward self-support created with each family.
- Comprehensive assortment of services that are available to implement the plan.
- Case management methodology used to track and evaluate progress, as well as adjust the plan as needed.
- Staff who are flexible and establish trusting and long-term relationships with participants.

Definitions of specific activities to be included in the Self-Sufficiency Service category are as follows:

Case Management

A system which helps program participants to achieve self-sufficiency through comprehensive education and other goal-oriented action under the guidance of a trained professional.

Services include outreach, advocacy, informal counseling, information and referral, follow-up and promoting active program participant participation in the process.
